ARTS, HUMANITIES & CULTURE

1) Harvard University’s Weatherhead Initiative on Global History Offers Postdoctoral Fellowships
   • Deadline: December 20, 2018
   • Amount: $50,000

   The Weatherhead Initiative on Global History (WIGH) at Harvard University identifies and supports outstanding scholars whose work responds to the growing interest in the encompassing study of global history. We seek to organize a community of scholars interested in the systematic scrutiny of developments that have unfolded across national, regional, and continental boundaries and who propose to analyze the interconnections—cultural, economic, ecological, political and demographic—among world societies. We encourage applicants from all over the world, and especially from outside Europe and North America, hoping to create a global conversation on global history.

   WIGH Fellows are appointed for one academic year and are provided time, guidance, office space, and access to Harvard University facilities. They should be prepared to devote their entire time to productive scholarship and may undertake sustained projects of research or other original work. They will join a vibrant community of global history scholars at Harvard.

1) Society for Research in Child Development Accepting Applications for Federal & State Policy Fellows

- Deadlines: December 14, 2018 – Federal Policy; December 21, 2018 – State Policy

SRCD offers two different policy fellowship programs: Federal and State. Both policy fellowship programs offer immersive opportunities for researchers to learn about policy development, implementation, and evaluation, and to use developmental science to inform public policy at either the federal or state level.

Scholars from a variety of backgrounds and scientific disciplines are encouraged to apply. Just as SRCD itself is an interdisciplinary organization, our fellows have backgrounds from a range of disciplines focusing on child development issues.

SRCD Federal Policy Fellowship Program:
- Individuals with a doctorate from any discipline relevant to child development
- Early, mid-career, and advanced professionals
- Applicants must have received a doctoral-level degree (e.g., Ph.D., Ed.D., M.D.) prior to the start of the fellowship.

SRCD State Policy Fellowship Program
- Individuals who have completed a doctorate within the past two years in any discipline relevant to child development.
  These applicants must have received a doctoral-level degree (e.g., Ph.D., Ed.D., M.D.) prior to the start of the fellowship.
- Current doctoral candidates studying any discipline relevant to child development who have completed at least two years of coursework.

1) Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Announces Leadership for Better Health: National Program Center 2018 Call for Proposals
   - Deadline: December 13, 2018
   - Amount: up to $120,000 over 4 years

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation’s Health Policy Research Scholars Program (HPRS) is a four-year national leadership development program for full-time doctoral students from nonclinical, academic disciplines with a policy focus—students who are committed to ensuring their research is aligned with the health needs of communities. The program is focused on researchers who want to improve health, well-being, and equity; challenge long-standing, entrenched systems; exhibit new ways of working; collaborate across disciplines and sectors; and engage others outside of the research community. By providing leadership development training, supporting opportunities to practice new behaviors, and learning to work in teams, HPRS will develop a new cadre of research leaders who will build a Culture of Health in their disciplines and communities.

The national program center (NPC) will oversee all aspects of Health Policy Research Scholars, and the program director will provide oversight for the program center. The roles and responsibilities of the HPRS national program center include:
- Recruiting Applicants and Reviewing Applications
- Developing and Overseeing Program Curriculum
- Transferring and Integrating the Existing Cohorts
- Fostering Interdisciplinary Exchange, Network-Building, and Collaboration
- Developing, Engaging and Managing and External Advisory Committee (NAC)
- Collaborating With Other NPCs to Maximize Impact of RWJF’s Signature Leadership Programs

Eligibility and Selection Criteria
- Organizations must have experience developing and/or mentoring doctoral students from diverse backgrounds.
- The national program director must be aligned with the goals of HPRS and willing to work in a collaborative capacity to foster the leadership development of doctoral students from a range of disciplines.
- Applicants must be either public entities or nonprofit organizations that are tax-exempt under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code and are not private foundations or non-functionally integrated Type III supporting organizations. The Foundation may require additional documentation.
- Applicant organizations must be based in the United States or its territories

1) Mozilla, Omidyar, Craig Newmark, Schmidt Futures Announce Responsible Computer Science Challenge
   - Deadline: December 13, 2018 (Letter of Intent)

Today, computer scientists wield tremendous power. The code they write may be used by billions of people and influences everything from what news stories we read to what personal data companies collect to who gets parole, insurance or housing loans - and who does not. When that power isn't coupled with responsibility, the results can have unintended consequences, negatively impacting users’ privacy, security, or wellbeing.

Through the Responsible Computer Science Challenge, Omidyar Network, Mozilla, Schmidt Futures and Craig Newmark Philanthropies are supporting the conceptualization, development, and piloting of curricula that integrate ethics with undergraduate computer science training, educating a new wave of engineers who bring holistic thinking to the design of technology products. The hope is that the Challenge will unearth and spark innovative coursework that will not only be implemented at the participating home institutions, but also be scaled to additional colleges and universities across the country — and beyond.

Between December 2018 and July 2020, we will award up to $3.5 million in prizes to promising approaches to embedding ethics into undergraduate computer science education, empowering graduating engineers to drive a culture shift in the tech industry and build a healthier internet.

ADDITIONAL OPPORTUNITIES (includes, Civic Life, Humanitarianism, etc.)

1) Teagle Foundation Issues RFP for Education in American Civic Life Initiative
   - Deadline: Rolling, with December 1, 2018 preference
   - Amount: up to $400,000 over 2-3 years

   The mission of the Teagle Foundation is to support and strengthen liberal arts education, which it sees as fundamental to meaningful work, effective citizenship, and a fulfilling life.

   To that end, the foundation's Education in American Civic Life initiative supports faculty-led efforts to prepare graduates to become informed and engaged participants in the civic life of their local, national, and global communities. Through the initiative, the foundation seeks ambitious projects that address gaps in the civic knowledge of undergraduates and prepares them for the intellectual demands of democratic participation. Successful proposals will seek to promote learning about the formation of the American republic, the crafting of its Constitution, the history of contention over the meanings of the Constitution, the development of representative political structures, and the principles of democracy. The foundation encourages a comparative approach to studying these principles that will deepen students' understanding of what is unique about American institutions by placing them in contrast to the principles and institutions of other societies.

   Grants of up to $400,000 over three years will be awarded to projects participating in the initiative, with the size of the grant determined by the number of institutions involved and the scope of the project. Planning grants in the range of $25,000 over six to twelve months will also be considered, especially for projects that involve multiple campus partners.

   The foundation welcomes the participation of a diverse array of institutions, including community colleges, liberal arts colleges, comprehensive, and research universities. Requests from both single institutions and multiple institutions partnering together will be considered.

   Concept papers are accepted on a rolling basis. However, priority will be given to those submitted by December 1, 2018. Upon review, selected applicants will be invited to submit a full proposal.
